

Perini Corporation Investigation

Finkelstein Thompson LLP Announces Investigation of Perini Corporation.

WASHINGTON, October 21, 2008 – The law firm of Finkelstein Thompson LLP has commenced an investigation of potential shareholder claims involving Perini Corporation (NYSE:PCR) (“Perini” or the “Company”).

On January 17, 2008, Perini announced that a developer of one of its largest construction projects, the $3 billion Cosmopolitan Resort and Casino in Las Vegas, Nevada, was in default on a loan from Deutsche Bank. In response to this news, Perini’s stock fell $10.05 per share, or 27%, to close at $27.65, on unusually high trading value.

Prior to these facts being disclosed to the public, Perini insiders sold approximately 4.2 million shares of personally-held Perini common stock for $193 million between March 2007 and December 2007.
