

Rock Band Foot Pedal Investigation

Finkelstein Thompson investigates allegations that the bass drum foot pedal for the video game Rock Band is defective.

Finkelstein Thompson is investigating allegations that the bass drum foot pedal sold as part of the hardware used to play video game Rockband is defective. Finkelstein Thompson is investigating allegations that the bass drum foot pedal sold as part of the hardware used to play video game Rock Band is defective. A recently filed complaint alleges that due to a design defect, the bass drum foot pedal breaks under normal use and renders part of the Rockband video game unplayable. At one point there was an extended limited warranty on all of the hardware used to play the Rockband video game in addition to the original 60 day warranty that came with the hardware. However, since October 1, 2008, that extended limited warranty has ended and owners of Rockband hardware are only protected by the original 60 day warranty.

If you purchased the Rock Band drum set, either on its own or bundled with the game itself, you may be entitled to a legal remedies. Finkelstein Thompson LLP specializes in representing defrauded consumers and welcomes inquiries from purchasers concerning their rights and interests in connection with this matter. If you feel you have been affected by this practice, please call our offices at (877) 337-1050 or contact Finkelstein Thompson by email at contact@finkelsteinthompson.com.